The Forum Program

The Forum presentation will center on how to sell your CEO. Professor Rich Flanagan will discuss how to identify the gap between practitioners and CEOs. Rich will define key obstacles and enumerate ways to create credibility.

The Dinner Program

Our Dinner Program presentation is entitled: "Future of Supply Chain – Achieving a 21st Century Supply Organization". Rich Flanagan will identify the role of Purchasing in the next ten years. He will discuss how to prepare for a new organization structure and define how to develop tactical approaches for success.

Speaker Background

Rich Flanagan's experience includes a combination of academic and practical "get it done" approaches. He has taught 14 different subjects at Franklin University while being an Adjunct Professor and later the Chairperson of the Process Management major. Rich is well known consultant in the Central Ohio Area from his work with numerous supply chain and logistical organizations. His "throughput" focuses which balances "product and process" flow with simplicity, has helped numerous organizations streamline their operations.

Rich started his career as a Military Officer reporting to the Deputy Chief of Logistics at Fort Belvoir, Virginia. He then moved to New York City where he was an Officer for Citi Banc specializing in their transportation and distribution system. Next he became Purchasing Director of First Banc Group (Bank One). During this time, he also became an Adjunct Professor at Franklin University. After five years, Rich left First Banc Group and started his own consulting firm. He increased his involvement with Franklin University and started working on the Process Management curriculum.

After five years of consulting, Rich became President of United States Cargo and Courier Service. Since teaching was a passion, he maintained his relationship with Franklin University. After six years as President, Rich decided to go back to consulting. Franklin University again asked him to increase his commitment, which he did. Rich has focused on consulting and teaching since 1989.

Rich has authored six academic workbooks on Supply Chain Management. He also created a throughput simulation models that his clients have utilized to streamline their operation. In addition he has created unique training approaches which combine practical and innovative approaches. This combination fosters others to think creatively and uniquely
